Description

DESCRIPTION Dating from the first half of the 18th century, this attractive walnut bureau has a fall front opening to reveal a well-appointed fitted interior, with an arrangement of small drawers and pigeonholes beneath shaped valances and a practical writing surface. Below are four graduated long drawers, fitted with brass handles and escutcheons, the whole raised on bracket feet. A practical piece of Georgian furniture offering both a useful writing space and generous drawer storage. DIMENSIONS Height: 105cm Width: 90cm Depth: 50cm CONDITION Structurally sound and in good usable antique condition, with marks, knocks, wear and historic repairs commensurate with age and use. There is noticeable sun fading to the walnut, particularly to the left hand side. The backboards and external brassware have been replaced. One key is present and operates one of the small internal drawers. There are no keys for the remaining locks. Overall, an attractive and practical Georgian bureau with a pleasing aged appearance and plenty of period character. As an antique or vintage piece, signs of age and use should be expected and are part of its character. The photographs form an importa...
