Description

A charming late 19th-century Italian Sorrento ware butler's tray table, crafted from richly figured olive, walnut and amboyna woods with intricate marquetry decoration. The rectangular tray top features an elaborate geometric border surrounding a central marquetry panel depicting delicate birds and floral motifs. The warm golden-brown timber, contrasting darker inlay and highly decorative patterning give this piece a particularly striking antique character. The removable tray top is reversible with felt top, supported on elegant turned and bobbin-turned legs, joined by matching turned stretchers. The detailed construction and decorative woodwork are characteristic of the late Victorian period and make this an eye-catching accent piece for a traditional, eclectic or antique-inspired interior.
