Description

A beautiful and elegant antique mahogany open armchair, dating from the late Victorian period, circa 1890, and designed in the Georgian / Chippendale tradition. The chair has a particularly attractive tall open back, centred by a finely shaped and pierced vase form splat with slender vertical detailing. The shaped crest rail and gently swept back uprights give the chair an elegant, well balanced silhouette. Gracefully curved open arms flow down towards the seat, while the straight legs are joined by traditional stretchers for additional stability. The rich, dark mahogany finish contrasts beautifully with the upholstered seat, which is covered in an attractive soft pink patterned fabric. The combination gives this traditional antique chair a distinctive appearance that works equally well in a period or more eclectic contemporary interior. A versatile piece that could be used as an occasional armchair, desk chair, bedroom chair, hallway chair or decorative statement piece. Seat Height: 41 cm The timber has developed an attractive aged colour and patina, retaining the character expected from a genuine antique chair of this period.
