Description

An early 19th century (circa 1830) set of six ash and elm spindle back chairs of superb patina, probably from the Lancashire or Cheshire regions. This set of six single chairs all with shaped rail to the top with two rows of five turned spindles with uprights to either side leading down to a rush seat, all in good condition, the seats having protective wooden strips to the front, sides and back. The chairs are supported on turned front legs with a pad foot and square legs to the back, the legs joined with stretchers, the stretcher to the front being turned. Reference: similar chairs can be found in the book 'English Country Chair 1500 - 1900' by David Knell, page: 325. This set of chairs are in very good condition for age, they are all of stable construction and can go straight into a home. Sizes: Height: 39" / 99cm Width: 18.75" / 47.5cm Depth: 15.5" / 39.25cm Seat height: 17.5" / 44.5cm
