Description

RETIREMENT SALE. 50% DISCOUNT. WAS £1295. NOW £650. A stunning and highly decorative French Art Nouveau multi-fuel cast iron stove, dating to the early 20th century (circa 1900–1920). Manufactured by the renowned foundry Deville & Cie in Charleville, France, this model (D.P.F. 600) epitomizes the elegance of the era. It is finished in a beautifully patinated, pale Majolica blue enamel coat. Richly cast with a cascading motif of organic roses, climbing floral tendrils, and swirling foliage, this piece is a magnificent example of period ironwork. Today, these stoves are highly sought after by top interior designers as a focal accent piece or converted decorative installation. Historical Provenance. The upper inner firebox lip features a crisp, beautifully cast maker's registry mark reading: "Deville & C, Charleville — 600 — 1D9" Founded originally in 1848 by Albert Deville and the Corneau brothers in the Ardennes region, the firm became known globally as Deville-Charleville in 1886, securing a legendary reputation for blending technical heating innovation with superior Art Nouveau artistic design. Design & Features Aesthetics: Elegant, curvilinear frame highlighted by hea...
