Description

A particularly attractive George II period walnut chest of drawers, of desirable small proportions and displaying a stunning rich colour and beautifully developed patina. The chest features a crossbanded top with re-entrant corners and fine herringbone inlay, with further crossbanding to the sides. The combination of figured walnut, delicate inlay and wonderfully mellow surface gives the piece considerable character and presence. The drawers are oak lined and traditionally constructed with hand-cut dovetail joints, housed within a substantial oak carcass, demonstrating the quality of its period cabinetmaking. Raised on characteristic squashed bun feet, the chest has particularly pleasing proportions and retains the understated elegance associated with early Georgian furniture. Features include: George II period Walnut with superb colour and patina Desirable small proportions Crossbanded top and sides Re-entrant corners Fine herringbone inlay Oak-lined drawers Hand-cut dovetail joints Oak carcass Squashed bun feet Excellent period character A beautiful and highly decorative example of early Georgian walnut furniture, combining quality craftsmanship, elegant proportion...
