Description

Arts and Crafts tile plaque with semi-nude maiden. A glazed, relief pottery tile manufactured by Craven Dunnill in the Art Nouveau style. Stamped 'CRAVEN DUNNILL & Co LIMITED, JACKFIELD IRONBRIDGE SALOP' on the reverse, and inscribed with the date 1899. Additionally inscribed '15D' which corresponds to pattern number. 32.5cm high x 17.5cm wide including the frame. Craven Dunnill & Co. Ltd. (formerly Hargreaves & Craven, then Hargreaves, Craven Dunnill & Co.) was formed on 9 February 1872, by Yorkshire businessman Henry Powell Dunnill (1821–95), at Jackfield, Shropshire, England. The firm was to become one of Britain's leading producers of ceramic tiles. Initially based in old buildings in Jackfield, the firm relocated to a nearby new factory, known as the 'Jackfield Works', on 25 February 1874. The historic Jackfield Works site was acquired by the Ironbridge Gorge Museum Trust in 1983, and part of it is now managed as the Jackfield Tile Museum, one of many museums operated by the Trust. More recently Craven Dunnill Jackfield were responsible for restoring the flooring of the Central Lobby of the House of Commons, relaying 60,000 tiles following the original design of Au...
