Description

A handsome 19th-century ash and elm Windsor armchair, featuring a tall two-tier hoop and stick back centred by a decorative pierced splat. The shaped arms are supported by finely turned uprights, above a broad solid elm seat with attractive natural grain. Raised on turned legs united by a traditional crinoline stretcher. The chair has developed a lovely warm, rich colour and patina, with the expected knocks, marks and surface wear commensurate with age and use, adding to its character. Extra measurement Seat height 42cm Condition: Good antique condition overall, with wear consistent with age and use. There are surface marks, scuffs, scratches and areas of rubbing to the finish, particularly to the seat, arms and legs. The chair has a rich, aged patina and appears structurally sound.
