Description

A particularly fine antique English painted satinwood display cabinet by Hampton & Sons of Pall Mall East, London, dating to around 1900 and retaining the firm's original ivory trade label. The cabinet is an impressive example of the late Victorian and Edwardian revival of elegant Sheraton and neoclassical furniture, combining beautifully figured satinwood with delicate painted decoration. Across the upper frieze are finely executed floral garlands surrounding a charming central painted panel depicting classical female figures dancing within a landscape. Further painted swags and wreaths enrich the lower frieze, creating a wonderfully decorative yet refined appearance. A pair of tall glazed doors opens to reveal a generously proportioned display interior with glass shelves and a velvet-lined back, while glazed side panels allow light to enter from multiple directions and provide excellent visibility for porcelain, silver, glassware or a specialist collection. The cabinet is raised upon four substantial square, fluted legs, giving the piece architectural presence while retaining the elegant proportions associated with late-19th-century neoclassical cabinetmaking.
