Description

Antique 20th century large carved display cabinet in oak, an impressive and generously sized piece with a strong traditional presence. Well made and of good quality, it offers both extensive display space and practical enclosed storage. The cabinet stands on bracket feet, giving it a solid, well-proportioned appearance. Three cupboard doors to the lower section provide useful concealed storage, while three large glazed doors above reveal six adjustable shelves in total - perfect for displaying china, glassware, books or cherished collections. Carved detailing is visible throughout, adding attractive decorative interest to the warm oak. The wood displays a rich colour with gorgeous natural grain, enhancing the quality of the construction and the cabinet's handsome appearance. Presented in good condition, this substantial cabinet would make a striking focal point in a dining room, reception room or library, offering a beautiful way to store and showcase treasured items.
