Description

A beautiful and characterful antique mahogany rocking chair, dating from the late Victorian to early Edwardian period, circa 1890–1910. This elegant chair features a traditional Windsor-inspired construction with a beautifully shaped solid wooden seat, tall decorative back and long curved rocking runners. The back is particularly attractive, combining a broad shaped top rail with a pierced central splat and a series of finely turned vertical spindles. The shaped open arms are supported by turned uprights, while the legs and lower stretchers display further traditional turned detailing. The rich mahogany colour, attractive grain and naturally developed patina give the chair considerable warmth and character. Its generous proportions and high back make it an impressive standalone piece as well as a practical rocking chair. Seat Height: 46 cm A wonderful addition to a traditional living room, bedroom, reading corner, nursery or fireside setting, and equally effective as a statement antique within a more contemporary interior. Very good antique condition with a solid and usable construction.
