Description

After Jean-Baptiste Greuze 1725-1805 French Impressive large mixed media Oileograph portrait of a young boy holding a basket of fruit and about to choose an apple. Produced in the 1960's influenced by 19th Century Manner with the appearance of a museum masterpiece. The picture is produced on canvas and has been finished with mixed media of inks and hand embellished in oil paint and clear gesso laid on in stages and layers to produce a finish with depth, texture and realism, which is known as an Oileograph. An oileograph is a method of mounting an high quality coloured lithograph onto real canvas in order to produce a visual finish virtually indistinguishable from the original old masters and are finished to a very high standard. PROVENANCE This particular picture had been one of a selection which was cleared with other contents from a 5 million pound property in Essex, and was on display as a replacement option by the owners instead of hanging very expensive originals costing a small fortune to insure. SIGNATURE Signed by artist lower left bottom corner 'Tyson'. FRAME Mounted within this magnificent heavy duty antique style ornate swept gilt frame which greatly e...
