Description

Antique 20th century Edwardian carved side table in oak, a wonderfully decorative piece that has charm from every angle. Well made and of good quality, it combines useful everyday function with the elaborate detailing that makes Edwardian furniture so appealing. Four turned legs give the table a graceful, balanced stance, while the lower shelf adds a practical place for books or personal items. The carving continues around the piece, ensuring it looks equally impressive when viewed from the side as it does from the front. The oak has a rich, warm colour and gorgeous grain, which highlights the carved work beautifully and gives the table real depth and character. It is a highly desirable piece with a presence that feels both elegant and inviting. Presented in good condition, this attractive table would be perfect beside a favourite chair, in a hallway, or as a distinctive bedside table - an easy way to introduce a little antique character into a room.
