Description

An exceptional, highly decorative 19th-century Victorian salt-glazed architectural stoneware window box planter and trough, manufactured by Guichard Carriès. Originally designed as a premium, heavy-duty low-basin fixture, this substantial piece has been wonderfully repurposed as a luxury outdoor planter. It features an architectural low-profile rim, crisp radius corners, and an elegant, deeply incised flowing scrollwork and foliate frieze wrapping seamlessly across the front and outer side walls. Crafted from high-fired, vitrified clay, it is entirely impervious to frost, weathering, and water damage—making it vastly superior and more durable than traditional porous terracotta window boxes. It is finished in a magnificent, lustrous caramel-gold salt glaze, displaying a beautiful, glassy "orange peel" texture that brings out the exceptional sharpness of the Victorian relief moulding. Its excellent proportions make it a standout choice for high-end landscape designers or decorators looking to dress an elegant window sill, a stone terrace ledge, an entrance path, or a formal garden conservatory room. (Note to buyers: This piece materially and stylistically pairs beautifully...
