Description

Clockwise is delighted to present another fine Regency London bracket clock in lovely condition for your consideration. This is a high quality mahogany and brass inlaid chamfer top bracket clock with dentil work to the case top and bottom and brass inlay throughout the case front. The clock is surmounted by a chamfer top with a gadroon finish adorned by a brass pineapple on a small plinth. The case edges are chamfered with brass inlay and the sides have original handles and lined brass frets. The whole case stands on matching ball feet. The painted enamel dial is in superb condition signed by the maker 'George Harris, The Strand' and is complimented by original period moon hands. The original locking cast bezel finishes off the appearance gloriously and one key fits both working original locks. This clock has a twin fusee wire-driven eight day bell striking movement with five pillars, as befits superior movements of this period, and shaped shoulders to the movement. The rack strike movement strikes the full hours on a glorious bell with a pull/repeat working facility to the side and the more desirable London pendulum is present, as is the all important travel stop.
