Description

Edward Bradford (Mid-19th Century) Portrait of a Lady (Regency-Style Watercolor) An exquisite and finely detailed mid-19th-century watercolor portrait depicting a lady in the elegant attire of the Regency period. The sitter is shown in profile, beautifully rendered with a lace-trimmed mob cap, ruffled collar, and a blue-ribboned bodice against a warm terracotta ground. Medium: Watercolor on paper Dimensions (Framed): 53 cm x 42.5 cm Framing & Presentation: Presented under glass within a slender gilt frame. The verso retains the original inventory stock label (413) and descriptive notes detailing the work's period style. Provenance: Direct collection history featuring renowned antiques expert, writer, and broadcaster Paul Atterbury (well known for his long-standing role on the BBC Antiques Roadshow), who is documented holding the piece. The G S. May Esquire Private Collection, London Condition & Photography Note: The available photograph quality reflects the best possible result given that the watercolor is presented behind glass.
