Description

An early 19th C quart mug, the mug with a cylindrical and outward tapering body with relief scene of two women, one in a hat and kneeling, shooting archery/target practice with a gentleman, also in a hat, with a stately home and castle, trees and foliage in the background. The scene with reeded brown banding above and below, and resting on a simulated "bamboo" base, the base impressed with, 'Turner'. The mug is in very good condition and with great detail! There appears to be a very small chip on the inside of the rim, however, this must have been prior to them applying the glaze to the inner portion as, it too, is glazed.
