Description

Nathaniel Sanders of Manchester, Circa 1775 Height: 7ft 2" Depth: 9" Width: 17.5" An exceptional Georgian oak longcase clock by Nathaniel Sanders of Manchester. The quarter sawn oak case is of the finest proportions and is typical in design of clocks made in the northwest of England c.1775. The cabinet is crossbanded throughout with fine pollard oak veneers, which are further inlaid with ebony and holly block stringing. The caddie topped hood is surmounted by three original water gilded wooden finials, below is a wonderful verre eglomise decorated panel, with fine original gilded decoration depicting swags and cherubs. The inlaid hood door is flanked by pollard oak turned columns, which are capped with brass capitals. The figured long trunk door with shaped top is crossbanded and flanked by pollard oak quarter turned columns, which are capped with turned wooden capitals. The crossbanded and inlaid canted base, with ogee bracket feet. The square brass dial is of elegant design with gilded spandrel mounts in the corners and engraved dial centre, with ringed calendar and subsidiary seconds zone. The silvered chapter ring has bold Roman numerals and an outer minut...
