Description

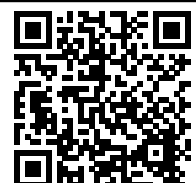

A stunning quality watercolour depicting a large brown squirrel sitting with delight as he carefully removed the shell of a nut in readiness to nibble. A early victorian oak table is beautifully painted with two large leather bound books shown, having a green porcelain flower vase sat on top of them and a small pale green dish of apples and tomatoes. A decorative patterned curtain is shown in the right hand margin, draped over the corner of the table, having a green tastled trim along the edge. Great attention to detail is seen in this quality watercolour, which is both sharp and executed in vibrant colours, with the large squirrel being the main feature, adding realism and life.
