Description

Part of a private collection of clocks we have just purchased in its entirety. An outstanding example of these rare and much sought after triple-weight Vienna wallclocks. Often referred to as a "blind man's clock" since it is possible to tell the time without seeing the clock. The latch-plate movement is fitted with deadbeat escapement and Strike/Silent facility. It strikes the quarters on rods, giving a very distinct, clear tone. It has just been fully serviced by our BHI registered staff. It has beautifully embossed art-deco style weights and pendulum, the pendulum being a mirror image of the centre of the clock dial.
