Description

This delightful and rare item is an elegant serving piece from the Edwardian tea table. Larger than a preserve spoon, it is a silver gilt ice cream spade. This would have been used for serving ices at high tea and is an unusual and desirable collector's piece. It has a cast foliate handle with vacant cartouches to the front and back and an engraved 'spade' end with gilding to the front. Condition :- Excellent, with no dents or splits. The gilding is good. Hallmarks :- Clear and readable. Maker :- John Round. Length :- 16 cms.
