Description

This charming tiny prayer rug has recently been found in Afghanistan and brought to me by an Afghan acquaintance. It arrived with a small hole in the centre - could it have been from a bullit! - and which I have since had expertly re-woven. The rug, which was made by Timuri tribes in western Afghanistan during the final years of the 19th century, has a beautiful glowing indigo-blue field comprising a small shrub or tree pattern overall and is in very good condition. It retains its flatwoven skirts at each end. Size: 1.14m x 0.89m (3' 9" x 2' 11").
