Description

An interesting late 20th century reproduction copy of an old master, presented in a period 19thc antique decorative re-gilded frame, much in the style of artist John de Critz, depicting Princess Elizabeth 1st 1582-1662 seen sat besides her loyal protector Sir Francis Walsingham (later to become Ambassador to France). The portrait has been re-laid onto an old early heavy canvas liner to strengthen and to appear 17thc period. ABOUT THE ARTIST John de Critz or John Decritz (1551/2 – 14 March 1642 (buried)) was one of a number of painters of Flemish and Dutch origin active at the English royal court during the reigns of James I of England and Charles I of England. He held the post of Serjeant Painter to the king from 1603. De Critz was born in Antwerp. His Flemish parents brought him as a boy to England from Antwerp, during the Habsburg persecution of Dutch Protestants, and apprenticed him to the artist and poet Lucas de Heere, also from Antwerp, who may have taught members of the Gheeraerts family and Robert Peake as well.[1] De Critz established himself as an independent artist by the late 1590s. [2] and in 1603 he was appointed serjeant-painter to the king. CONDITION The su...
