Description

Clarence F Underwood (1871-1929) A set of four Edwardian Prints, Published by Quail & Warner an American Company 1901 Copyright. c1950s. Underwood was an American and studied at the Art Students League in New York and at the Julian Art Academy in Paris. He became a painter and illustrator of romance and glamour themes in a fairly academic style. Many of these images of upper class women wound up on leading magazine covers such as Century, Studio, McClure's Harper's and The Saturday Evening Post. During World War One he began producing patriotic images for posters. Underwood was a popular artist and much of his work was reproduced on postcards.
