FREE UK MAINLAND DELIVERY William Perring Hollyer was born in Dover in 1834, the first son who survived beyond early childhood of Joseph Hollyer and Amelia Perring Mannings. Joseph was a Herald Painter by trade (painting coats of arms on the carriages of the gentry), so this is perhaps where William got his artistic skills from. Many of Joseph's other sons became Artists on Glass. William specialised in animal paintings, especially Scottish scenes which were very popular in the mid 19th century, such as Highland cattle, Stags etc. Despite his love of Scottish scenes, there is no evidence that he actually went there. In 1851 he moved with his parents from Dover to L...
