Description

Rolltop Edwardian Bureau Desk - English Oak - c1910 Presented in very good antique condition this is a quality rolltop bureau with pleasing proportion. Rising from hidden castors the bureau shows all of the classic elements of the rolltop style with field panel sides and a feature back - allowing the bureau to be placed centre of a room if required. The practical nature of the desk is demonstrated with the full length side drawers - the lower pair on each side offering sufficient depth for full size files. Additionally there is a centre drawer above the knee. The desk benefits from slides at either side which provide extra working space and make a fine place to rest elbows when working at a keyboard. A smooth running tambour slides effortlessly to reveal the fitted interior. Pidgeons holes, cubbies, pen-slides and drawers combine to provide excellent storage. There is a later hole to the rear of the desk which allows access of cables for the purposes of computers and other desk electrics - the circular brass blanking plate for this is seen at the rear on images. Whilst the lock plates are present there are no internals or key. It is very solidly crafted in wonderfu...
