Description

An interesting oil on canvas painting depicting a circus rehearsal session with a young boy holding up a hoop in readiness to encourage his trainee dog to jump through. His second dog sits patiently on the top of a large drum, awaiting his turn to be called, with a third young pup looking unsure and hiding behind an open chest stood on end as the boy's seat. The monkey sits quietly and looks on with interest. The painting is tastefully painted and captures the warmth and charm of the ringside rehearsals behind a green and brown striped canvas tarpaulin. TITLE Hand painted inscription lower right bottom corner "The Rehearsals" possibly added at a later date. This painting is a very sought after subject matter and is hard to find others on the open market today. DATE The dateline is approximately circa 1900-1910 CONDITION Very good condition after clean and revarnish by restorers in the recent past. This lovely example of circus art looks at its best under the glow of a good picture light. In all a very pleasing colourful picture full of interest to the viewer.
