Description

Bruno Zach (1891 - 1945). Art Deco Bronze Figure "The Riding Crop" depicting a scantily clad girl standing provocatively and holding a riding crop behind her back. Mounted on a marmo portoro marble base. Signed on the bronze base "Zach" and "Austria". C.1930.

Bruno Zach was born on May 6, 1891 in Zhytomyr, Ukraine and became a well-known Art Deco sculptor. His life ended in Vienna, where he died on February 20, 1945. Bruno Zach was interested in the arts and decided to leave his home and birthplace for studying and learning. He went to Vienna, Austria, the famous birthplace of the Vienna Bronze and the foundry Bergmann and started to attend the Academy of Fine Arts Vienna. While Zach attended the Academy, he studied under two very famous Austrian sculptors: Hans Bitterlich, who taught as professor at the Academy from 1901 to 1931 and Josef Müllner, who had been a professor at the Academy since 1910. The young artist Zach worked during his time in Vienna for many various foundries, where he improved his sculp...
