Description

A fine quality early 19th century French Directoire period MAHOGANY MANTEL CLOCK of "portico" design, with superb ormolu mounts to the figured mahogany columns and decorated with fine ormolu panels applied to the pediment and base. The eight-day movement strikes hours and half-hours on a bell via the outside countwheel, whilst the good engraved silvered dial is set within its ormolu bezel and is complete with the original and very fine blued steel hands. The pendulum is a true 'tour de force' with very fine ormolu work to the bob below the 'grid-iron' pendulum rod. Perfect working order and guaranteed at least two years. 20ins (51cms) high.
