Description

An interesting military oil portrait of a smartly groomed young officer wearing his red coat tunic and regimental badged peak cap. Painted to a good standard onto a piece of tin or zink metal thin liner and backed onto picture board, securely preserved under glass and gum tape sealed verso. This is obviously a British Officer in uniform of presently unknown regiment, who looks to be in age around his late twenties. CONDITION. There are a few tiny chips to the paintwork lower right corner (image 13) and slight marks along the lower bottom margin (image 14), which we thought best left as seen as the picture has been fully sealed from behind inside a later replacement wooden frame.
