Description

This fabulous acquisition acquired from a private UK collection, is a 19th century 'nano' or cradle, woven by Afshar tribes in plain-weave, brocade and tufts of knotted pile in the two minor borders - quite charming. The long woollen warps are plaited to provide strength when tying the cradle to a wooden frame - just like a hammock. The pale golden vegetable-dye yellow field contains stylised 'botehs' - leaf or pine cone shapes - and the cradle is in mint condition. Size: 0.92m x 1.35m (3' 0" x 4' 5") including tassels.
