Description

A decorative pair of George III period (1760-1800) oil portrait paintings on canvas, set inside their original re-gilded frames, priced to sell at near trade value. Presumably they are man and wife and complement each other nicely as ideal decorative wall pieces. The aristocratic gentleman is depicted in armour with his loyal pet dog being by his side. His loyal and noble wife is shown wearing her elegant satin blue gown with a marble pillar seen behind her. The pair are really attractive works, solely meant to lavish the walls of a large palladian home of distinction, serving to display a person's wealth through possessions of charm. CONDITION Frames recently re-gilded to tidy and canvases have been lightly cleaned and varnished some years ago.
