Description

After A C Havell, A Coloured Photogravure of A Fox-Hunters Dream, Published by Messrs Forres of Picadilly, London on April 15th 1890. Highly Decorative. Alfred Charles Havell British 1856-1928 Born in London, this painter was the son of Edmund Havell Junior and Ellen Havell, (McKaner), being therefore one of the important Havell family members of painters who originated from Reading. For some years he is recorded as living at the same address as his father but later moved to various other London addresses. He died on March 13 th of pneumonia at 116 King Henry's Henry's Road, South Hampstead. One of the witnesses on the proving of the will was Mr. George Poole Forrester, head of the Forrester Gallery for whom Havell had worked for many years in the studio over Forrester's Shop in Piccadilly and it is said one could hardly see across the room for pipe smoke! Havell painted many fine racehorse portraits of which a large number were engraved. He was also a good human portraitist. Several sets of hunting prints were produced after his work. He also made many illustrations for Forrester's books. 61 x 48 cms Image Only
