Description

This pair of brass candelabra shaped as a vase of flowers with an ornate base date from around the early part of the 20thC. There are six candle holders surrounded by flowers, leaves and branches, and they are supported by a main stem emerging from an urn shaped pot. They measure 64cm in height and 43cm in width, and the triangular shaped base are 19cm across. Both are in good condition, although some stamen on the flowers lower down have been removed indicating that these may have been displayed next to something like a clock and this was deliberately done to prevent the object in the middle from being scratched. The price includes p&p within the UK mainland only, but viewing and collection can be arranged in the Surrey area as we no longer sell through a retail outlet. Please contact us if the delivery is to be outside the UK mainland or abroad for a quote for postage and packing.
