Description

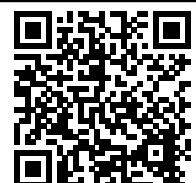

A good early Victorian nine drawer twin pedestal writing desk. This mahogany pedestal desk dates to around 1850 having a very useful size and good proportions with inset columns to the front edges. The rectangular top retaining its original mahogany banding has a thumb mould around the edge and black leather insert sitting above three frieze mahogany drawers with moulded cockbead and brass knob handles. The top is raised upon two pedestals each with inset columns and having three graduated drawers with twin pin brass locks and brass escutcheons sitting on mahogany plinth bases. Splitting into three sections for ease of transport this is a very good quality pedestal desk of a lovely colour with good proportions and is freestanding as it has a polished back. Restored to original condition this pedestal desk is ready to grace any study.
