Description

Norman Lloyd (Australian, 1897-1985) - 'HOUSE OF VICTOR HUGO, PARIS' - oil on board. Currently being secured in frame Norman Lloyd was born on 16 October 1894 in Hamilton near Newcastle, NSW, Australia, where he attended primary school. He left school in 1911 and started to work and study painting with Julian Ashton and James R Jackson in Sydney. On 31st October 1916 he enlisted with the Australian Imperial Forces and was transported to Europe where he was seriously wounded in battle a year later. After returning to Sydney in February 1918, he took up painting lessons at the Julian Ashton Art School again. From 1921 to 1926, Lloyd exhibited with galleries in Sydney and Melbourne, showing landscapes and Sydney harbour scenes painted in the more traditional style of his teachers. From 1926 to 1929, Norman Lloyd visited Europe and travelled widely in Italy and France, exhibiting in the UK, France and Australia, culminating in a solo exhibition at Macquarie Galleries in Sydney. In the 1930s, Lloyd emigrated to London with his wife Edith for good, setting up a boarding house in St. Johns Wood and establishing himself quickly in the new society, being a kind, generous a...
