Description

A Pair 18th Century of Oak Joint Stools Coffin Stools These superb Joint or Joined Stools were originally intended to be used in the family home at sad time of a funeral, they would have been placed at either end to support the coffin for the family, friends and servants to pay their last respects to the deceased. These are a wonderful pair of stools with a lovely patina, they have a makers stamp underneath LW, the edges of the stools are slightly misshaped where the edges have been worn away with constant use, they make great occasional stools, or even small side tables.
