Description

This is one of the most unusual lamps we have had in stock for some while. It has three brass columns on a triangular soft grey marble base, supporting a round decorative top with a cream fabric shade in the middle. Around the top are three Saytr figures with long horns, and at the bottom of each pillar is a cloven hoof. It is beautifully made, and we think the fabric shade must have been replaced at some stage, the lovely glass drops coming down from the shade are original. We date the lamp to be very early 20thC. It can be viewed in the Surrey area by appointment. It measures 48cm in height in total; the three pillars are 28cm long. The three sided base is approximately 11cm in width, and the circular top is approximately 21cm in diameter. We have had it rewired with fabric cable for the UK market, and the postage and package costs for mainland UK only, has been included in the price. We are happy to quote delivery costs for elsewhere.
