Description

Circa 1920 - 1950, This very pretty chrome chandelier has five upright candle lights and three tiers of multi faceted icicle drops, which are unusual in shape - but it is hard to show them clearly in the photographs. There is another lightbulb fitted at the base of the central column that reflects light around the tiers of drops underneath. It has proved very difficult to photograph, mostly because of the number of glass drops but it has been exceptionally well made. It is mostly good quality chrome, with chrome frames around, and there little brass effect balls holding up the glass candle cups. In photo 1 we have altered the background so the drops can be seen, but the brass details are lost in the process. The chandelier measures approximately 61cm in length and about 49cm across. It has been completely rewired by our electrician to UK specifications and it comes with the original ceiling fitting, although if a smaller one is required, we can supply that. If the buyer can arrange collection from Surrey we will pack it ready for transport and offer a good discount on the price.
