Description

The Turkmen Bokche is a rare find these days. It is shaped like an envelope and was initially woven to contain a large flat loaf of bread which was symbolically important at the wedding ceremony. Afterwards, the bokche was used by the bride for containing her most treasured small possessions. The bokche is considered to rank as one of the most highly regarded weavings in any Turkmen collection. Size: 64cm x 64cm (2' 1" x 2' 1").
