Description

Early C19th Regency period scroll-end day-bed . Classically-inspired Grecian design day-bed of exaggerated asymmetrical scroll-ended form. Free-standing ,double-sided design, finished in original creamy/off-white painted decoration (some old refreshment) with parcel-gilt highlights. The oblong reserves above the legs with original gilded cast-lead decorative floriolate mounts . Raised on sabre-legs fitted with original well-defined cast-brass claw castors. Taking its inspiration from Greek antiquity and popularised by the neo-classical designs of the likes of Thomas Hope ,George Smith, and drawings from Ackermans 'Repository of Arts'. A rare survivor retaining its original calico base covering. In good original 'country house' condition. W 68" D 26" H (seat) 15" England c.1810
