Description

Attractive 17th century brass warming pan lid later turned into a wall sconce, likely 19th century upgrade. No candle arm currently but fitting ready for alteration into a light or similar. Pretty pierced and punch decorated lid with concentric rings and arches to form a flower effect. The centre is mounted with a finely detailed beaten copper star. It measures 12 1/2" wide. Condition is very good, the tip of one of the star points is torn, otherwise light surface wear, polish residue to the back.
