Description

An absolutely exquisite 19th century three-legged country stool in elm and beech. The superbly dished saddle seat, fashioned from a single piece of English elm, has an abundance of charm and character with old repairs, an original finish, and a lovely rich colour. It is supported by two ring-turned front legs and a single multi-faceted back leg. This is a really lovely example of a country-made piece of English furniture, and it dates from c.1860s.
