Description

A charming Georgian cut glass rinser from the Regency period. Rinsers or coolers were used for chilling or rinsing wine glasses at the table, between courses. One per person would adorn the table, facilitating the repeated use of the same glass for different wines. Later it became more common to have a different glass for each wine. Although it's original use is no longer relevant, the rinser can be a lovely collector's item and has practical uses as a bowl. This beautiful example has half fluted sides and a band of cut decoration. P&P contribution :- £10.00 UK £25.00 Worldwide Condition. Excellent, with no chips or cracks. There is a small scratch to the inner rim, commensurate with age and use. Origin :- Anglo/Irish. Date :- c1820. Height :- 8.5 cms. Diameter :- 9.25 cms.
