Description

A lovely all original 19th Century "Optical Diagonal Machine". In total original condition with a ring of lead to the base. These instruments were very popular from about 1750 for viewing "Perspective Views" (Vues D'Optique) which were specially prepared prints; typically topographical images. The prints were designed to provide strong architectural perspective, which was significantly enhanced when viewed through this simple yet ingenious machine, producing an "almost" three d. Please email me or call me for further information and take a look at my other interesting items. Many thanks Karen
