

SA390527

Pair of Edwardian Maxwell Leather Boots & Trees

Price

Sold

Item Reference: SA390527

Date of manufacture: 18th Century

Description

A pair of Gents' Edwardian Henry Maxwell Leather Riding Boots complete with the original wooden Trees of which are stamped "Maxwell, Dover St. London". The boots with wonderful patina and character, a great decorative item. FREE DELIVERY WITHIN ENGLAND & WALES LAPADA MEMBER Henry Maxwell was founded in 1750 and is the oldest of the remaining bootmakers in London. Originally a famous spur-maker (you can see Maxwell's spur collection at 83 Jermyn Street), Maxwell thrived on the ubiquitous use of the horse for battle, ceremony, hunting, sport and personal transport, and ultimately supplied boots for cavalry regiments, hunting, polo etc. By the mid 19th century the firm was prospering internationally and was awarded the first of its many Royal Warrants by King George IV. By the early 20th century, before the horse was superseded by motorized transport, Henry Maxwell had grown dramatically and supplied boots, shoes and a wide range of riding and hunting accessories from shops in London and Paris.

Seller Details

William James Antiques

Coltishall Norfolk United Kingdom By appointment only.

Tel: 01603 736947

International Tel: +44 1603 736947