Description

Victorian large burr walnut oval dining table Here is a large Victorian walnut dining table. This type of table is known as a Loo table which was a Victorian parlour game. In modern times these have become used in many situations and for many uses. The most obvious use is for dining, but they also make the most wonderful tables to be placed in the centre of entrance hallways or rooms just as for conversation or the pleasure to your eye. Imagine dining at this table with your friends and family, it certainly will make the time even more special. The table with the large oval top with stunning quartered burr walnut and end grain molding. The solid walnut carved base standing on quadruple cabriole legs. The legs with the original china wheel concealed castors under. The table also has the unusual feature that the block that the top sits on is also veneered in burr-walnut, this is sign of high quality in its construction. 141cms long (55 1/2ins) 109cms wide (43ins) 74cms high (29ins) PRICE MATCHING Antiques are quite unique as it is impossible to price match.
