Description

Unusual little early 20th.c. double ended daybed c.1930. Stands as a backless window seat, or for the end of a bed perhaps, both arms are hinged, lowering to two alternative positions to make a daybed or chaise longue. Arms and base in beautifully worn tan leather, the loose seat cushion has been recovered in a closely matching faux leather. With two loose cushions in their original buttoned velvet. Raised on tapering oak legs. Lovely colour and condition with only minor distress to the leather. Dimensions: width 63", depth 28", height 29".
