Description

A late 18th/early 19th century Folk Art wooden childs toy in the form of a recumbent calf, possibly Eastern European . The calf would have originally had four wheels attached and a cord at the front to enable it to be pulled along. The calf would have probably been made by a family member as it is in a very naive style and this adds to the character of the piece. The calf is made from a hardwood, possibly teak although this is quite hard to identify due to the wonderful patina. This is not only a great piece of teak but would also have been a very loved toy. Size: Height: 11cm / 4.25" Width: 5cm / 2" Depth: 19cm / 7.5"
