Description

Gorgeous early 19th Century waistcoat of the highest quality made of the finest silk, lined with cotton and delicately decorated with a woven floral pattern. A garment of this quality and design is likely to have been worn by a gentleman on his wedding day. The front of the waistcoat is a delicate creamy golden silk and there are two lined front pockets. There are seven buttons / button holes and the buttons are covered in the same silk fabric. There is a very nice collar on the waistcoat that sits high around the back of the neck and extends to about half way down the garment. The back panel of the waistcoat is a light cotton material with two pairs of ties at the base of the back of the garment to give structure and fit to the waistcoat when worn. It was originally made as a men's waistcoat but nowadays could suit either sex. For a rough guide to size and fit I am a woman's size 10 (34" around the bust") and the waistcoat fits me about right. Measurements : Shoulder to shoulder : 12" Bottom of armhole to armhole across the back : 19" Length collar to bottom : 21" Please bare in mind the ties at the back give a lot of structure and shape and are adjustable to with...
